He had repayed these favors, not in a battle-field like his fellow-officers, but by becoming a spy over his companions and superiors. Buonaparte possessed the true Italian character--mistrust and profound dissimulation. He confided generally in the venality of mankind, and thought he could buy every one with gold and baubles--titles and orders. He ordered V to Catalonia, to observe, particularly, the actions of Macdonald. Napoleon had never liked Macdonald, not even after the battle of Wagram, when he embraced him before us all, and said to him: Macdonald, let us forget the past; let us be friends: I name you marshal, etc. He learned only to appreciate Macdonald when it was too late, --namely, at the time of his forced abdication at Fontainebleau. When I left Macdonalds cabinet at Mora, I called Captain Lava lette into my apartment, and questioned him concerning Colonel V....
